PARIS, Jan 27 (Reuters) - The United States reported a first outbreak of H5N9 bird flu on a poultry farm, the World Organisation for Animal Health said on Monday.

Highly pathogenic avian influenza, commonly called bird flu, has spread around the globe in the past years, leading to the culling of hundreds of millions of poultry.

However, the strain that has caused most damage in recent years was the H5N1. The H5N9 is more rare.
