Using Cast Vote Record data available for Clark County, Nevada, data analysts with ETA identified patterns consistent with election fraud.

LAS VEGAS, NV, UNITED STATES, January 20, 2025 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Data Analysts with the Election Truth Alliance (ETA), a non-partisan non-profit organization dedicated to election analysis, dialogue, and action, have completed an independent investigation of ballot-level voting data in Clark County, Nevada, for the 2024 U.S. Presidential Election.

This analysis has identified patterns that are consistent with vote manipulation, as has been seen in countries with confirmed election interference. (ie. Georgia, Russia)

Drop-off vote abnormalities across multiple swing states indicate potential manipulation at the county level, and a consistent underperformance by Candidate Harris across five separate states warrants further investigation.

Drop-off votes refer to the difference between votes for the top race on the ballot (the Presidential race) and the next down-ballot race (for Nevada in 2024, this was the Senate).

While a negative drop-off vote percentage is not unusual, the consistency of Candidate Harris' underperformance in numerous counties across the swing states warrants a thorough review.

In late December 2024, Clark County, Nevada, publicly posted its Cast Vote Record (CVR), providing ballot-level data representing all three voting types (mail-in, early voting, and election day). This also included results by tabulation machine and vote allocation by ballot, enabling a detailed assessment of the voting data.

In their review and analysis of this CVR data, ETA data analysts documented abnormalities in Clark County, Nevada.

Key observations include:

- The overall drop-off vote rate in Nevada was higher than the historical average for presidential elections, with a disproportionately larger gap in precincts favoring Candidate Harris.
- While both Main-In and Election Day voting results show no significant indicators of manipulation, Early Voting data results reveal a spike in Candidate Trump's votes when reported by tabulation machines that processed a higher volume of ballots. The pattern becomes more distinct (closer to 60% votes for Trump, closer to 40% votes for Harris) with more ballots processed by a given voting machine.
- Additionally, early voting data lacks expected randomness in voting distribution. This pattern is not present in the Election Day voting data.

According to Nathan Taylor, Executive Director of the Election Truth Alliance: “In the Clark County Early Voting data, we see indications of a potential ‘vote-flipping hack’ that may have shifted votes after 400 ballots are processed, gradually limiting Candidate Harris to near 40% and Candidate Trump a minimum of around 60% vote totals.”

The Election Truth Alliance is pursuing an independent audit and validation of the 2024 Presidential Election. Additional details on county-specific election analysis findings and planned audit actions are available through the organization’s website.

Why It Matters

Trump frequently pushed the unproven claim that the 2020 election was rigged against him in favor of Joe Biden. There are new allegations of results "consistent with vote manipulation" in the 2024 election, where Trump defeated former Vice President Kamala Harris.

What to Know

Two election integrity groups have suggested that analysis of voting behavior in 2024 swing states could indicate irregularities.

On Tuesday, the Election Truth Alliance (ETA), a self-described nonpartisan nonprofit organization that was founded in December 2024, said its analysis in Clark County, Nevada, produced results "consistent with vote manipulation."

Newsweek has contacted ETA via email outside of regular office hours.

The claims were based on the drop-off vote rate in Nevada, a swing state Trump won in 2024, which was higher than the historical average for presidential elections, according to the ETA. The group also said there was an apparent "spike" in Trump's votes when tabulation machines processed a higher volume of ballots.

"Drop-off vote" refers to the difference between the votes cast in the presidential race, i.e. at the top of the ballot, and those cast in statewide elections, such as Senate races that a voter can find further down the ballot, held the same day.

ETA said that while drop-off votes for candidates are not unusual, the consistency of Harris' underperformance in numerous counties across the swing states "warrants a thorough review."

In 2024, Trump received 493,052 votes in Clark County, with the losing GOP candidate for a Senate seat, Sam Brown, getting 441,057. This is a difference of 51,995 votes, amounting to 10.5 percent drop-off.

In comparison, Harris won 520,187 votes, with Senator Jacky Rosen getting 514,662 votes, amounting to a 1.06 percent Democratic drop-off. Trump won Nevada overall in November by nearly 50,000 votes.

Nevada in 2020—was 5.1 percent, while the Democratic drop-off was 5.9 percent. The drop-off rate between 2016 and 2024 more than doubled in Trump's favor.

In December 2024, SMART Elections, a nonpartisan project focused on improving election security, also said that analysis of drop-off votes in key swing states at the 2024 election "seems strange."

Newsweek has contacted SMART Elections via email outside of regular office hours.

In a blog post, the group noted that its findings are not proof that the last election results were "incorrect or manipulated."

The group also listed reasons why there might be a significant drop-off in presidential votes compared to statewide elections. These include pro-Palestinian voters not wanting to support either candidate, new Republican voters only caring about Trump, and potential racial or gender biases against Harris causing her to underperform.

On the eve of Trump's second inauguration, several critics of the president suggested he was openly discussing how Musk helped rig the race in the key swing state of Pennsylvania.

While speaking at a rally on Sunday, January 19, in Washington, D.C., Trump said Musk had an understanding of the voting machines used in Pennsylvania "better than anybody," adding: "And we ended up winning Pennsylvania like in a landslide."

Tristan Snell, a former assistant attorney general for New York and vocal Trump critic, wrote on X that he was admitting Musk "rigged the election for me" with these remarks.

What People Are Saying

The Election Truth Alliance wrote in a January 21 statement: "Drop-off vote abnormalities across multiple swing states indicate potential manipulation at the county level, and a consistent underperformance by Candidate Harris across five separate states warrants further investigation."

SMART Elections wrote in a December 12 blog post: "There are often many more votes for the Republican presidential candidate (Trump) than for the Republican Senate candidate (or major down-ballot race). Especially in the swing states, we did not find this on the Democratic side. Instead, on the Democratic side, we find an opposite phenomenon. There are a large number of votes for the Democratic Senate candidate (or major down-ballot race) where there is no vote for the Democratic presidential candidate (Harris)."

What Happens Next

Democratic New York Representative Daniel Goldman has called for an investigation into Trump's "vote-counting computers" comment regarding Musk.

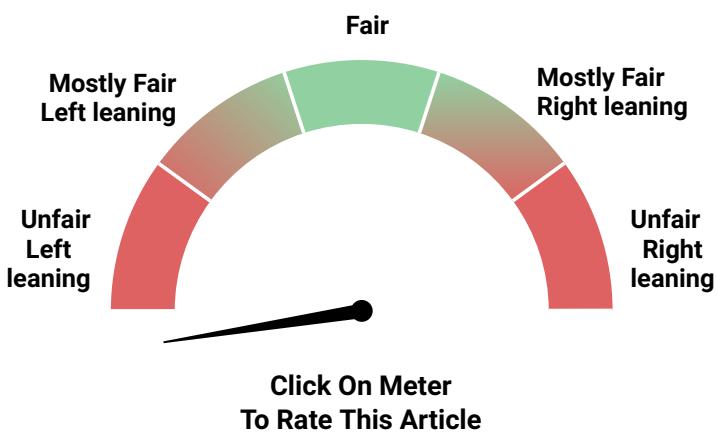

It is unlikely the Department of Justice or FBI, under the Trump administration, will investigate allegations of 2024 election vote rigging at the federal level.
