

Where's the Constitution? White House says website will bring it back soon.

Francesca Chambers Sudiksha Kochi USA TODAY and

Published 3:41 p.m. ET Jan. 21, 2025 | Updated 4:16 p.m. ET Jan. 22, 2025

B

×

7

Watch: Donald Trump sworn in as the 47th president of the United States Donald Trump has been swom in as the 47th president of the United States in Washington, D.C.

WASHINGTON – When President Donald Trump's team took over the White House website this week, it made quick work of taking down web pages that featured the country's founding documents and espoused the views of the previous administration.

A silhouette of Trump and a bold-faced "AMERICA IS BACK" message appeared on the homepage. New links to presidential statements and remarks appeared along with the text of a mountain of newly signed executive orders.

But what was missing from the revamped White House website was nearly as noticeable to frequent visitors: pages explaining the Constitution and Bill of Rights, promoting tourism, equity, internships and information about former American presidents of both political parties.

Bio pages for former U.S. presidents including Republican stalwarts Abraham Lincoln and Ronald Reagan turned up error messages along with those of Democrats Jimmy Carter, Barack Obama and Bill Clinton.

Visitors to a Spanish-language version of the White House site also received a 404-error that told them the page could not be found.

ドオ 46 Photos [©] ドオ VIEW FULL GALLERY

See President Trump's inaugural parade, signs executive orders

See the pomp and circumstance of the inaugural parade and celebration for President Donald Trump at Capital One

The White House indicated the errors were unintended and temporary.

"It's day two. We are in the process of developing, editing and tweaking the White House website. As part of this ongoing work, some of the archived content on the website went dormant. We are committed to reloading that content in a short timeline," said principal White House deputy press secretary Harrison Fields.

The administration asked for patience as it builds out the new White House website.

"We are committed to bringing back online the Spanish translation section of the website," Fields said.

When Trump entered the White House in 2017, his team took down pages about LGBTQ+ rights and climate change, as it proverbially cleaned house.

A copy of Biden's website was preserved as an archive, like those of his immediate predecessors. An archive of Trump's first term also remains.

What's the truth? Sign up for USA TODAY's Checking the Facts newsletter for all the answers.

(This story was updated with new information.)

Ð

X

7

We're always working to improve your experience. Let us know what you think.

Releases Accessibility Sitemap Subscription Terms & Conditions Terms of Service Privacy Policy Your Privacy Choices SupportContact Us Help Center Manage Account Give Feedback Get Home Delivery eNewspaper USA TODAY Shop USA TODAY Print Editions Licensing & Reprints Advertise With Us Careers Internships Support Local Business $\textbf{Stay Connected} \, \mathrm{News \, Tips}$ Submitting letters to the editor Podcasts Newsletters Mobile Apps Facebook X Instagram LinkedIn Threads YouTube Reddit Flipboard Our Portfolio10Best USAT Wine Club Shopping Bestselling Booklist Southern Kitchen Jobs Sports Betting Sports Weekly Studio Gannett Classifieds Home Internet

Blueprint Auto Insurance Pet Insurance Travel Insurance Credit Cards Banking Personal Loans LLC Formation Payroll

Software

AboutAbout Us Newsroom Staff Ethical Principles Responsible Disclosure Request a Correction Press